Yonder & Beyond Ltd (ASX: YNB) announced today that its subsidiary, Beyond Media, has extended its collaboration with Lenovo to include the delivery of Virtual Reality and Gaming related technologies.

This move further enhances the VR and Gaming capabilities of the content delivery platform Beyond Media is building for Lenovo. Together, Beyond Media and Lenovo are working to create a differentiated platform for customers and content owners through an upcoming entertainment hub that enhances the user experience.

VR is experiencing strong momentum: A recent Gartner survey forecasted the Head Mounted Display (HMD) market to grow by 340 percent this year (Source: "Forecast: Wearable Electronic Devices, Worldwide, 2016"). To use a HMD, the user needs a VR- ready computer, and that illustrates the importance of this hardware-software collaboration.

The agreement also highlights the deepening relationship between Beyond Media and Lenovo and their commitment to the Lenovo Entertainment Hub project.

Yonder & Beyond and Beyond Media CEO, Shashi Fernando said, "This agreement highlights the power and potential of our existing Lenovo relationship and our ability to develop and capitalize on cutting edge technologies, creating the potential for further revenue streams in current and future content delivery platform projects."

Dave Cree, Director of Software and Content Services at Lenovo said, "This deployment further shows how we're giving customers rich content on performance-heavy gaming devices with our Legion brand of gaming computers. Beyond Media's technologies help us deliver an immersive and content-loaded experience that sets our PCs apart."
